Volunteer firefighters decked out in light-up bunny ears welcomed a large crowd of children with parents, grandparents and other area residents in tow to the Elk Point Fire Hall on Good Friday.

The firefighters, many handing over their festive headgear to young visitors as the morning wore on, cooked and served mountains of pancakes so the visitors could enjoy a hearty breakfast before the chefs shut off the grills and turned their attention to the morning's biggest attraction: the Elk Point Volunteer Firefighters' Sixth Annual Easter Egg Hunt.

Divided into three age groups, the youngsters headed upstairs to the firefighters' recreation room, where one group at a time scoured the area for eggs, some scattered on the floor, others hidden everywhere from pool table pockets to under firemen's helmets to behind sofa cushions and lined up on windowsills. One lucky child in each group found an even bigger prize, a large golden egg that qualified these three to also receive an overflowing Easter basket of treats.

Madison Povaschuk was the winner in the age four and under group, with the five to eight year old prize going to Cole Pierce and the nine to 12 award won by Samantha O'Reilly.

However, these would not be the only winners of the day, the youngsters discovered, as nine firefighters lined up along the vintage fire truck, armed with fuzzy bunnies and ducks, as nine names were pulled from the door prize draw bucket. Lucky winners were Colby Havener, Arman Josh, Jackson Schell, Siswan Pravcott, Riley Bourne, Kadyn Bourne, Julia Farrell, Lincoln Jurak and H. Peters.

Chamber, town working on solutions

VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

Elk Point and District Chamber of Commerce president Jonny Nielsen reported that discussions with town council earlier in the week has seen "a lot of ideas tossed around. It was a good meeting, and we're looking for a solution that will benefit everybody."

Council has indicated that the Town will once again sign the appropriate paperwork to renew the chamber's $150,000 loan, thus giving the chamber an opportunity to find ways to reduce the balance. Several suggestions came forth both for this and for reducing operating costs, including looking into "green" grants to change the EcoCentre's lighting to LED bulbs and keeping track of the kilowatt hours used by the staging area security lights. It was also suggested that the chamber could sell the wind turbine and use the funds to add more panels to the solar collector, to increase the amount of energy the facility produces.

Nielsen said the outdoor access washroom is now completed, except for one part that arrived damaged and has been reordered. An automatic locking device will lock the washroom overnight, but a switch has been installed to override the lock in circumstances such as the Iron Horse 100 run when it is needed to accommodate the participants.

The solar lighting tubes have not yet been installed, but the contractor who completed the washroom is tracking down information on how this should be done. Another issue regarding the EcoCentre is the bamboo flooring, and while it will need to be replaced in time, it is not an urgent matter and could be done one area at a time.

A question was raised at the chamber meeting regarding the necessity of having an elevator in the facility, as it is rarely if ever used, costly to maintain and takes up a large area on all three floors that could be put to better use. Town manager Myron Goyan agreed to look into regulations regarding the necessity of having handicapped access to the upper floor.

President Nielsen also reported that nurses at Elk Point Healthcare Centre have been doing some redecorating in their spare time, with paint provided by the Healthcare Centre Auxiliary, "and it looks very nice." There is again a shortage of registered nurses, and he would "strongly encourage the (staff recruitment and retention) committee to get more, so the hospital can keep operating."

Policing was on the agenda again, and Nielsen said he had spoken with those hoping to get the Citizens on Patrol going again. They have only six members signed up to date and need more to operate, and he has suggested they contact the Rural Crime Watch to see if there would be volunteers from that organization.

It was back in 1796 that the first vaccine was administered. It was for smallpox. However, it was in the 20th Century that many new vaccines were developed to control once-common diseases like diphtheria, mumps, measles, hepatitis, polio, tetanus and flu. A vaccine for malaria is also on the horizon.

Medical advice is readily available from many different sources including the internet. However this can be a double-edged sword because both accurate and inaccurate information abound in cyberspace. It's important to know the difference and get your information from reliable sources.

If you want reliable information on a disease, talk to your doctor of course. Also you can go to the disease websites. For lupus and MS, just type lupuscanada.org or mssociety.ca You'll find a wealth of reliable information on each disease with ideas of where to go for further information.

In Type I diabetics, the body's immune system destroys the pancreas' insulin-producing cells making daily insulin injections a necessity. Hopefully, in the near future, encapsulated cell therapy will remove the need for these injections.. Stem cells are used to make insulin-producing cells, covered in a special coating to make them impervious to immune-system attack. Research on this is moving quickly.

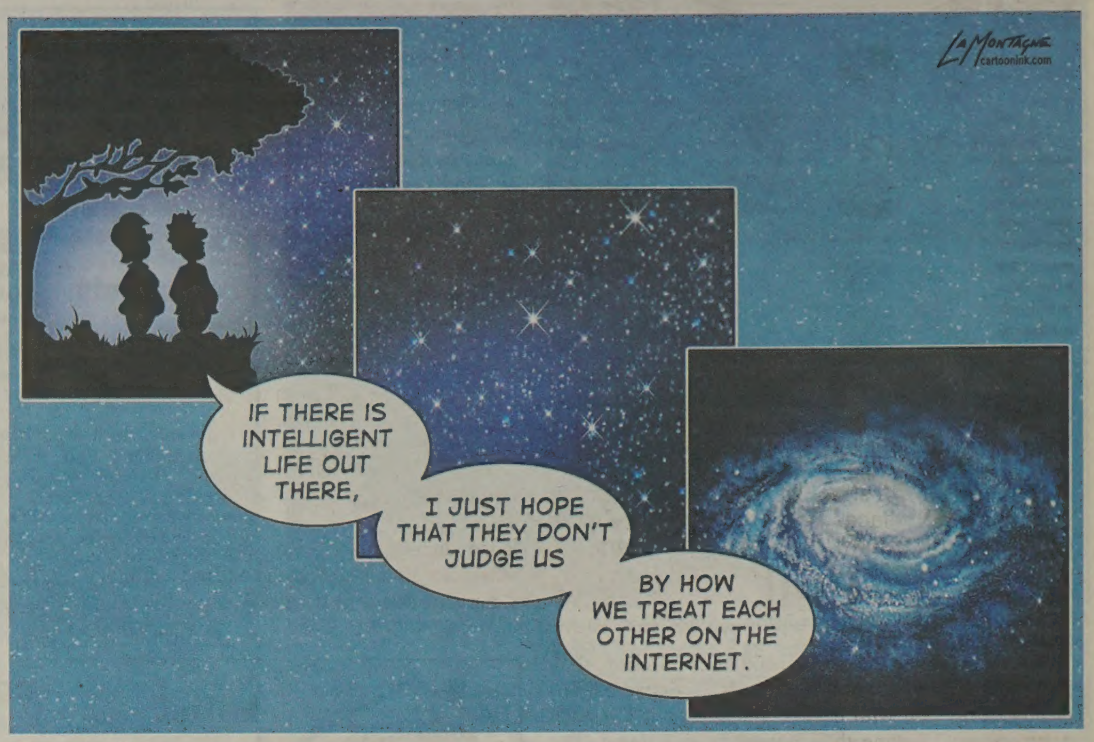
Clean up our food sources

It's somewhat ironic that as World Health Day approaches, with this year's theme of food safety, that our email is stuffeded with notices of recalls, expanded recalls and more recalls.

The World Health Organization is no doubt concerned about food safety in Third World and developing countries, but these recalls are right here at home in Canada and Alberta, and are of food we might be able to purchase in our local stores and most certainly could in stores in our larger cities.

It has gotten to the point where some of us are wondering if it's safe to eat produce, meat and poultry that we haven't grown ourselves, and canned, frozen and butchered at home, where we know how it's handled. Many are concerned about genetic modifications, but it seems the need for clean food handling must be the number one priority for processors and manufacturers.



Way Back When

Elkettes, Elan, "Culture of Peace"

Here's the news that made the headlines of the Lakeland Review and Elk Point Review for the week of April 7 in...

1985

Lots were biting at Kehewin Lake as the Elks Lodge hosted their end-of-season ice fishing derby. Elk Point Golf Club met with town council to discuss leasing the course and to turn down the town's offer to give them the house being moved to build the new seniors' lodge, for use as a clubhouse.

1990

Wives and girlfriends of the Elks Hockey Club donned the team's road game sweaters and took on the men in one of the most entertaining games of the year, Tracy Oryschuk and Judy Scott with two goals apiece, Sue Campbell, Sandra Ockerman, LeeAnn Wozniak and Patti Laboucane with singles and a free goal in the ladies' favour because of the men's delay of game giving the "Elkettes" a 9-8 win.

1995

Elk Point Surface Rights Association bid farewell to Amoco Canada and its superintendent Ron Johnson and welcomed Elan Energy and its superintendent Bernie Heinrichs at a luncheon just hours after the completion of the sale of Amoco's interests to Elan. Safe storage, handling and transportation were highlighted at a firearms information meeting hosted by the Elk Point Community Advisory Policing Committee.

2000

Elk Point's new post office was officially opened, with Mayor Ed Buck cutting the ribbon held by postmistress Coral Tremblay and Canada Post representatives. Planning was underway for Canada Day, with "A Culture of Peace" set as the theme, in keeping with the United Nations International Year for the Culture of Peace.

2005

Canadian Salt's Lindbergh works won the Salt Institute's coveted Outstanding Safety Achievement Award for worker safety, marking 700,000 worker-hours without a single lost-time accident.

2010

A huge and enthusiastic crowd gathered at Elk Point's new fire hall as the volunteer firefighters hosted a free pancake breakfast and the community's first-ever full-scale Easter Egg Hunt.

Special Report

Quest for the lost bell

QUINTON AMUNDSON
Review Contributor

This past Thursday marked the 130th anniversary of one of the most important events in the history of the Frog Lake First Nation - the Frog Lake Massacre.

It was a tragedy that took the lives of nine people, and saw the destruction of the buildings in the community, including the church, which was dedicated to Our Lady of Good Counsel, and the rectory. The smoke that permeated throughout the community blackened the Bell of Frog Lake, and the scaffolding that supported it.

Two months later, in June of 1885, the bell was stolen.

A report filed by historian Dr. Juliette Champagne pinpoints the time of abduction to the middle of that month. Soldiers of the Ontario-based Millbrook Company were in the community from June 11 to June 21, and while they were there they reportedly stole the bell as a souvenir of the North-West campaign that quashed insurgency from the Metis and Aboriginal groups living on the Canadian Prairies. The conflict between these groups, and the Canadian federal government, is famously known as the Northwest Rebellion of 1885. The piece of evidence that supports this version of events is a diary entry from Will Young, a soldier of that company. In the letter he boasts about how he and his friends took the bell.

The report produced by Champagne was compiled in a bid to support the Frog Lake First Nation in retrieving the historic bell. The report contains all the proofs of the bell belonging to Frog Lake, and it also debunks incorrect myths about the bell. The bell's current holding place is in Saint-Boniface, Man., in the possession of Bishop Albert Thevenot of the Diocese of Prince Albert.

In recent weeks, there have been ongoing negotiations taking place with Bishop Thevenot's legal representation and a lawyer representing Frog Lake, in a quest to get the bell back to Alberta.

"We really want to settle this in an amiable fashion if possible," says Champagne. "No one wants to go to court. It always costs a lot of money and it creates hard feelings."

In addition to the documental evidence collected by Champagne, a CBC Doc Zone documentary, which Champagne helped create, called The Mystery of the Bell, and a Radio-Canada documentary entitled La légende de la cloche (The Legend of the Bell), also reached the same conclusion that the bell belongs to Frog Lake.

Shirley Quinney, the historical project director of the Frog Lake First Nations, has been spearheading the effort to bring the bell back to Frog Lake. She says while the bell has not been present on the reserve for over a century it has never been forgotten.

"My late father, Arthur Stanley, was the person who told me about the history surrounding the bell," says Shirley. "My father would take me to the sites and educate me about what took place. The elders also passed on stories about what happened, and talked about the bell that became lost."

She says everyone in the nation is rooting for the return of this bell.

"Our people have suffered enough. This is something we all want to bring back home so we can just bring peace and harmony back into our community."

"The bell has so much significance," says Shirley's husband, Derrick Quinney. "Over 100 years it has been gone. What kind of stories do you think that bell can tell us if it could talk? It is overwhelming to think about."

The Batoche Confusion

Up until The Mystery of the Bell documentary was first aired on April 10, 2014, there was widespread belief that the bell that was stolen by the Millbrook soldiers was the famous Marie Antoinette bell from Batoche, Sask.

Parks Canada produced an oral history account of how the bell was stolen from that community in 1885. In a black-and-white film, Senator John Boucher of the Metis National Council talks about how his grandmother told him about she had seen Canadian soldiers steal the bell.

The "Bell of Batoche" once again captured the attention of a nation in 1991 when Billy Delaronde, a Metis man from Manitoba, took it from the Milbrook Legion.

"The Batoche Bell really did become a symbol for the Metis in the Northwest," says Champagne.

Shirley Quinney is the woman spearheading the effort to return the Bell of Frog Lake to Frog Lake. As enthusiastic as she was seeing the bell in her visit to Saint-Boniface, Manitoba, she will be more excited when it returns home after 130 years.

Bell

"It represented the losses and the suffering they had endured in 1885, and afterwards. They were completely devastated with having much of their livestock destroyed, and having their houses burned down. The Canadian soldiers did all kinds of damage to them.

"These people rallied around the bell. When the CBC documentary (The Mystery of the Bell) came out, it was quite a shock for these people. There are still some naysayers because of this oral history account."

One of the people who believe in this oral history account was Delaronde. When he took the bell at Milbrook in 1991, he did not believe he was committing a criminal action, but instead an act of repatriation.

Delaronde said in the CBC documentary that at one point he considered throwing the bell in a lake, because holding onto the bell became such a burden. His friends convinced him to return it to Batoche.

Bishop Thevenot, who is Metis, played a central role in the negotiations that saw the bell's safe return to Batoche in July 2013. It was unveiled at the annual Back to Batoche Days festival.

As part of her work on the Mystery of the Bell documentary, Champagne discovered that the Marie Antoinette bell was never actually stolen from Batoche.

By examining missionary papers and parish archives, Champagne discovered the Marie Antoinette bell was actually donated to the neighbouring parish, St. Laurent de Grandin.

It was relatively easy for the parish of Batoche to part with the Marie Antoinette bell, at that time. This bell, which only first came to the community in 1884, was replaced with a larger bell less than 10 years later.

"The bell was donated to St. Laurent in 1937, and then it was destroyed in a fire in 1990," says Champagne.

A story published on the CBC website on April 10, 2014, the same day its documentary first aired, shows a picture of Champagne with the burned remains of the Marie Antoinette bell.

Frog Lake pushes to reclaim lost bell

The Mystery of the Bell contained a bounty of documental evidence that indicates that the "Batoche" bell is actually the Frog Lake bell. Champagne's report indicates that the bell was first established at Our Lady of Good Counsel in 1883.

In addition to the documentary being available for viewing on the CBC website, the documental evidence is available to view as well. Some of the documents on the website, which reveal that the bell belongs to Frog Lake include:

- The diary of Millbrook Company soldier Will Young—discovered in 1999—that states two of his friends stole the bell from the Roman Catholic Mission of Frog Lake. The letter states that the bell was the "best relic brought to Ontario."
- A letter penned by Bishop Vital Grandin, who served the Diocese of St. Albert. It was composed on Aug. 27, 1885, and addressed to Father Leon-F Fafard. In the letter he describes the desolation of the Frog Lake Massacre. He states that the bell was still there on June 8, but now it is gone because some soldiers took it away.

Bell

He said while people "searched mightily for it, we have been unable to find it."

■ A letter from James O'Loane, a Catholic man, to Bishop Grandin, written on May 18, 1888. In the letter, O'Loane reports that the Frog Lake Bell is either in an Orange Lodge or a fire hall in Milbrook, Ontario.

■ An article in the Toronto Mail, dated July, 19, 1888. In this article, Captain Charles Winslow, the commander of the Milbrook Company that took the bell, says the bell belongs to the Frog Lake Church, and thus it should be returned.

The Frog Lake case for the bell has been boosted in recent weeks with the discovery of two additional documents.

One of those documents is a claim report by Fr. Moulin of the Batoche Parish, which was produced in 1885 and sent to the Canadian government. In this report there is no mention of a bell being stolen.

Champagne says, "There were damages to the building. There was also a loss of 700 feet of rail fence that was worth $70, the loss of an accordion worth $15, two gallons of mass wine worth $6, a portfolio full of cash and other items, but no bell."Champagne stated in an email to the Journal that Fr. Leduc, the vicar of the Diocese of St. Albert, did claim a loss of a church bell from the Frog Lake Mission.

The other document discovered within the last three weeks is a sessional paper from 1887, which contains a summary of claims, including the one from Fr. Moulin.

The fact that a bell had not been listed among the items to be replaced at the St. Antoine de Padoue parish in Batoche, was definitely a significant discovery.

"It was such a jubilant moment for us to finally find that last piece of evidence that we were looking for," says Champagne.

The last meeting between the group from Frog Lake and Bishop Thevenot, including his legal representation, took place on March 10. It was at that meeting that both sides agreed the bell should be housed at a neutral location until a conclusion is reached.

That location is the vault of the La Société historique de Saint-Boniface.

Locals are confident that the bell will return to Frog Lake. And when it does return, it will be placed in an interpretive centre. People from around the world will have the ability to learn about this bell's storied past. It will also serve as an important instrument in teaching young people about the Frog Lake Nation's past. One designation this returned bell won't have is "war trophy."

Friends, Historical Society plan projects

VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

The Friends of Fort George and Buckingham House and Elk Point Historical Society held their joint meeting on March 26, with the first order of business being the election of executive for the Friends for the coming year. President Vicki Brooker, vice president Marjorie Scott, secretary Daphne Schnurer and treasurer Dennis Jasinksy were all returned to their positions by acclamation.

FGBH program coordinator Ross Stromberg is looking forward to the coming season and has been interviewing potential staff members, including two who have worked there in previous years.

He reported that new blinds have been installed in the interpretive centre.

This summer's events at the Forts include a revised version of the Bears and Berries Festival on Saturday, July 18, featuring displays and demonstrations rather than craft sale booths, as well as the Teddy Bears' Picnic and other activities. An all-new event entitled Bushcraft 1792 is slated for Saturday, Aug. 29 and will include a range of outdoor activities of special interest to teens and preteens.

Marjorie Scott told the Friends that life member Russell 'Rusty' Williams, who attended numerous functions at the Forts over the years, usually with camera in hand, passed away in late January at the age of 88. Williams celebrated his birthday in conjunction with the Forts des Prairies Jamboree a number of years.

Elk Point Historical Society proposed a joint project with the Forts, that of putting all the large amount of research compiled by the late Louis Verhagen on the Peter Fidler family genealogy onto a program that could be on a computer that could be accessed by visitors to the interpretive centre. "We could add photos and stories, and it could attract members of the family to visit the Forts," Marvin Bjornstad suggested. The family tree includes 15,355 names, 5,500 marriages and 3,300 surnames from 21 generations dating back to the year 645 AD. He suggested a simple website to go with it, and said he could set one up.

The Historical Society has received a letter from the Elk Point United Church board, offering the society the potential of a 99-year lease on Elk Point's original school, built in 1910 and most recently used as the church's rummage store. Historical Society members will arrange a visit to view the structure before they decide if they are interested in obtaining the building as well as possible uses for it.

Bjornstad received approval from the members to buy a large format scanner and printer for use in scanning maps and other documents for the historical society

The groups' next joint meeting will be held at the Forts on May 14, when Stromberg will introduce them to his 2015 interpretive staff. Fort George and Buckingham House Historic Site opens for the season on May 15, and remains open until Labour Day, Sept. 7.
